

A LUXURY WEST MICHIGAN
WEDDING DESTINATION

IT ALL STARTED WITH A LOVE STORY

In the early 1900's Dorr Felt was drawn to the pristine beauty of West Michigan's coastline. He decided to establish an estate where he, his wife Agnes, their four daughters, and their families could call home during the warm summer months. Dorr Felt developed the dune land into a thousand acre farm with a beach house, carriage house, farm house, and even a petting zoo. In 1925 Dorr started construction on Felt Mansion, affectionately known as "Agnes' House". Taking three years to build, Dorr paid attention to every detail, creating a magnificent home that continues to impress people today.

In 1927 Dorr and Agnes's daughter Dorothea was the first bride to have her wedding reception at the estate. Before gathering at the estate to celebrate with family the ceremony was held at Gibson Church a little white country church about two miles northeast of the Felt Estate. In 2010 the church was moved onto the estate and is now known as the Chapel at Shore Acres.

Dorr and Agnes' love story endures to this day memorialized in the mansion and their legacy is carried on with each couple who adds their chapter to the story as they celebrate their wedding at the estate.
